Willkie Hints He Favors All-Out Aid For Britain

MAJOR AFRICAN WARFARE LOOMS

British Notables At Dinner With U. S. "Emissary"

LONDON, Jan. 29.—After meeting the entire British cabinet at dinner last night and attending a vital British labor meeting today, Wendell L. Willkie strongly hinted that he favors all-out American aid to Great Britain.

In the middle of a rapid-fire round of conferences, the former Republican presidential candidate indicated — without directly saying so — that he is prepared to return to the United States and urge heavy financial and other aid to the British war effort.

"What do you think of Britain as a good risk?" Willkie was asked. He replied:

"I have a very strong opinion on that subject. But I do not believe I should express my opinion at this time."

"However, you would not be the least bit disappointed if you knew what that opinion was?"

This remark, particularly in the light of other comments Willkie has made in London, was regarded on all sides as the frankest hint he feels able to make at present that he favors full American aid.

Talked with Cabinet

Meanwhile, revelation that Willkie had talked with the entire cabinet at dinner last night came as a surprise.

Willkie conferred this afternoon with General Wladyslaw Sikorski, prime minister of the Polish government in exile.

It had been announced that Willkie dined with Lord Beaverbrook last night, but only today did the news leak out that all members of the British government had honored the American visitor by their presence.

The dinner was held in one of London's famous west end hotels. This morning, after rising early, Willkie received one of Britain's most noted socialists, Prof. Harold Lasker.

STRONG MAN OF GREECE'S FIGHT ON ITALY DEAD

Premier Metaxas Victim Of Throat Ailment; Entire Nation In Mourning

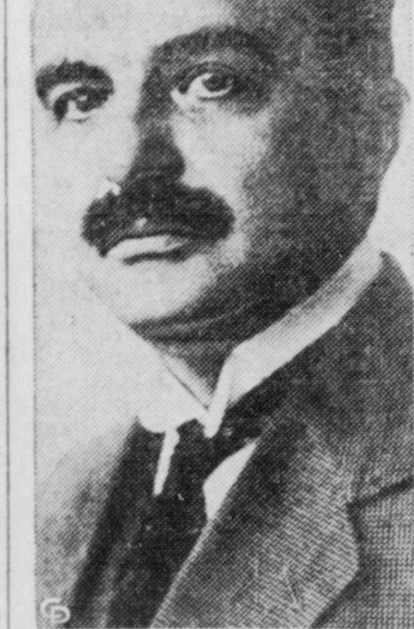

KING NAMES SUCCESSOR

Two Blood Transfusions Fail To Save Leader Of War Forces

ATHENS, Jan. 29.—Premier Gen. John Metaxas of Greece, who smashed the legend of Fascist invincibility by turning back the Italian invasion, died today after undergoing an operation for a throat ailment.

The nation, grief-stricken by its loss, made clear its determination to carry on the war against Italy to a victorious conclusion.

Flags were flown at half-staff everywhere throughout Athens and in every town and village of the country. Many persons in the streets wept without restraint when announcement came over loud-speakers that the man who had successfully led Greece against the Fascist invasion had passed away.

There was complete calm, however, and every indication that all of Greece would persist in its determination to preserve liberty and independence at all costs.

Successor Named

King George II lost no time in choosing a successor to Metaxas in the person of Alexandros Korizis, governor of the National Bank of Greece.

(Editor's Note: A German official news agency (DNE) dispatch from Athens said Metaxas died of heart failure.)

(This same agency reported from Sofia that telephone connection between that city and Athens was suspended by the Greeks this morning.)

An official announcement said the dictator-premier passed away at 6:30 a. m.

The premier died at Kifissia, a suburb of Athens.

On Sunday, January 14, Metaxas was taken ill, suffering from a throat ailment.

By January 24 he was suffering from a throat ailment.

KINNAW RECEIVES 50 CENTS FOR FAIR DUCAT

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29.—State Fair Manager Win H. Kinnaw today announced receipt, by mail, of 50 cents from a last year's fair visitor whose conscience apparently bothered him.

"Please accept 50 cents for my having jumped the fence at the 1940 fair instead of having entered at the gate," a note accompanying the money said. The letter was unsigned but bore a Perrien Springs, Mich., postmark.

PERE MARQUETTE ORDERS 12 MORE LOCOMOTIVES

LIMA, O., Jan. 29.—The Lima Locomotive Works, Inc., today announced receipt of orders for fourteen locomotives costing an estimated $1,750,000.

The Pere Marquette Railroad ordered 12 freight engines of the 2-8-4 type with driving wheels 69 inches in diameter and an overall weight of 803,000 pounds. The Chesapeake and Ohio ordered two passenger locomotives with 72-inch driving wheels.

These orders, company officials said, in addition to several under construction, assure capacity production at the Lima works until late in the summer. Forty locomotives are now under construction.

BRITAIN ORDERS UP YOUNG MEN FOR ARMY DUTY

George VI Signs Decree To Use Boys As Youthful As 18 Years Of Age

LONDON, Jan. 29.—British boys as young as 18 years old and men up to 40 were made liable for military service today when King George VI signed a proclamation calling up wider age groups to the armed services.

The monarch signed the proclamation at a meeting of the privy council in Buckingham Palace.

The royal proclamation embraces youths 18 and 19 years of age and men from 37 to 40 years of age.

Nineteen-year-old boys, representing the military class of 1921, were ordered to register for military service on February 22.

The proclamation was accompanied by changes in the schedule of "reserved occupations" — in which workers are exempt from military service — and raised the reservation ages in some instances.

It also made reservation, or exemption from armed service, depend to an increasing extent on the importance of the work being done.

Further registrations will progressively take in the older men, leaving the 18-year-old boys, representing the class of 1922, to the last.

The number of men affected by the new proclamation at present is problematical, since the reserved schedule is still to be pruned and the new schedule is not yet complete.

It was stated authoritatively in connection with today's announcement that before the war is over no man will be permitted to do work capable of being performed by a woman.

UCKER WILL BEQUEATHS MONEY TO KIN, CHURCH

The will of the late Rose Ucker was probated Wednesday, leaving a large portion of the $50,000 estate to nieces and nephews.

Va., $2,000; Miss Henrietta Stocklen, Circleville, $3,000; Benjamin Ucker, Circleville, $1,000; Mrs. Minnie Brannon, Circleville, $2,000.

St. Joseph's Catholic Church was granted $2,000. The residue of the estate will be divided equally among Olive Stocklen, Mark Stocklen, Mary Stocklen and Everett Stocklen.

Real estate constitutes about $32,000 of the total estate.

Mrs. Olive Stocklen will receive the property at 228 North Court Street, and Andrew Thomas all her rights to the farm in Deer-creek and Wayne Townships.

C. A. Leist has been named executor of the estate.

FORD WILL QUIT BEFORE BOWING TO CIO DEMAND

Detroit Magnate Informs Washington He Would Rent His Plants

CONFERENCE IS DECLINED

Effort Of Hillman To Talk With Magnate Meets With Rebuff

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Henry Ford has notified Washington that he will never operate his huge industrial organization under "closed shop" conditions and, if ordered to do so by a Labor Board decree, will retire from American business and offer his factories to the government for federal operation at a dollar-a-year fee, it was learned today.

Ford delivered this ultimatum to a high defense official when asked to meet with Sidney Hillman, CIO leader, in an effort to solve all labor issues affecting the Ford industry. Ford flatly refused to consult with Hillman, declaring he would never permit the CIO leader to "tell me what to do."

The Detroit motor magnate, who has amassed one of the greatest industrial fortunes in the world, told the official that:

He is willing to cooperate with the President and the American people to any degree possible in aiding the National Defense program, but that he will not stand for a closed shop in any of his factories. If it comes down to a question of accepting the closed shop, he will offer to turn his factories over to the government.

FIVE DESIGNATED BY DRAFT BOARD AS NEXT QUOTA

Selective service officials Wednesday announced they were prepared to send five men to Fort Hayes, Columbus, on February 12, the third quota called from the county.

The five, all of whom are volunteers, are Robert Corman Black, Ashville, Route 2, order number 10; Henry Hale Muncie, Canal Winchester, Route 2, order number 901; Howard James Edgington, Circleville, order number 1841; Russell William Streets, Circleville, Route 3, order number 1305; and Millard Fraley Jr., Circleville, order number 622A.

The first colored youth to go from the county will be Harrison Hill, Circleville, order number 317A, who will be sent to Fort Hayes on February 20.

One hundred questionnaires will be sent out Thursday to replenish the waiting list. The Advisory Board will meet in the Court House next Tuesday from 1 to 4 p. m. to assist registrants with their questionnaires.

TEACHER, NAMED BY GIRL, TAKES LIFE IN SCHOOL

WEST NEW YORK, N. J., Jan. 29.—William H. Lounsbury, supervisor of manual training at Memorial High School, snuffed off his life in spectacular fashion today just prior to his scheduled arraignment on charges involving a 15-year-old girl student.

Lounsbury's body was found by firemen after an explosion of accumulated gas in the school's cooking department wrecked the department and shattered windows for blocks around. Half of the lower floor of the school was laid in ruins.

Police said Lounsbury apparently entered the school during the night and turned on 100 gas jets in all-four jets on each of the 25 stoves in the cooking department. A spark from electric fixture is believed to have caused the explosion.

HOUSE CHANGES LEASE-LEND ACT

Committee Would Ban U. S. Convoys, End Life Of Measure In 1943

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The House Foreign Affairs Committee in secret session today re-wrote President Roosevelt's lease-lend bill to ban convoy, provide periodic reports to congress and to end the life of the proposed law June 30, 1943.

A fourth restriction would make it necessary for the President to consult with ranking Army and Navy officials before transferring any defense materials to another nation.

Committee members said their action was tentative and subject to final vote later.

Chairman Bloom, D. N. Y., told reporters the measure would be reported out of committee to the House tomorrow.

SHRILL SCREAMS ADD TO MYSTERY IN FATAL BLAZE

BOSTON, Jan. 29.—Hollis A. Lee, 37, a prominent cotton company executive, was found burned to death early today under mysterious circumstances in his apartment on Beacon Hill which was lavishly decorated with antique Chinese pottery which he collected.

Police began a hunt for a woman who was reported to have slipped out of a side entrance to Lee's first floor apartment as smoke billowed from the windows.

Neighbors reported hearing feminine screams and the sounds of breaking glass shortly before the fire broke out. The body was badly charred and there were traces of injuries on the head. A living room window was found broken.

Occupants of an adjoining apartment said a loud argument in Lee's rooms preceded the fire. The argument was followed, the neighbors said, by the shrill screams of a woman. Then came the sound of shattering glass.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—The stock market sagged again today with declines running to more than a point. U. S. Steel lost over a point, Bethlehem a point and the rest of the steels were heavy.

400 AIR FIELD WORKERS STRIKE

Dayton Scene Of Strife Over Employment Of Non-Union Men

DAYTON, Jan. 29.—Construction work on Wright field's $1,550,000 expansion program was halted today as approximately 400 workers, members of the Dayton Building Trades Council, went on strike because of the alleged employment of four non-union workers.

Lieut. Col. Lester T. Miller, commanding officer of the U. S. army air field, said he had been informed by officials of the Penner Installation Company, of New York, that the four men were making installation of equipment manufactured in the company's plant. The company officials claimed the men were working under a supply and not a construction contract as claimed by the union.

ITALIAN FORCES FAIL TO BREAK GREEKS' LINES

ATHENS, Jan. 29.—Hurling themselves at Greek strong points along the entire northern Albanian front, Italian forces stepped up the pace of their great counter-offensive, but failed to crack the Hellenic lines. From the Devoli River to the shores of Lake Ochrida, the Fascist forces attacked repeatedly, but latest reports in Athens said they were being thrown back each time.

This "Free French" army of the South dashed into Libya after a swift, 300-mile advance from the border of French equatorial Africa. The column, composed of African camel corps and wild desert tribesmen, smashed into the Italian airbase at the Murzuk-Pessan oasis, defeated a numerically superior Italian force and then destroyed the Italian equipment, according to information in Cairo.

To Play Vital Role

It was believed this column now will form the backbone of a still greater army which will continue to harass the Italians in southern Libya while the British imperial and other "Free French" units strike further westward along the Mediterranean coast.

In Eritrea, it was reported, the British were steadily closing in around Agordat and Italian lines in this sector were reported seriously disorganized.

46 MORE OF COLUMBUS' PARKING METERS RUINED

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29.—The city of Columbus was faced today with the prospect of replacing and repairing 46 parking meters, either stolen or smashed by vandals last night. Police estimated the loot obtained from the meters at $100 but said damage would amount to several times that figure.

'Free French' Army Moves Into Libya To Assist Empire's Troops

MILAN, Jan. 29.—Great Britain plans a gigantic general offensive throughout Africa and the Mediterranean, Premier Mussolini's newspaper Popolo d'Italia warned today.

"The Italian population," Il Duce's paper said, "must prepare to face a simultaneous and enormous British offensive effort on all land, sea and air fronts."

"Outcome of the war depends on Italian resistance to this offensive."

"The British will strike in Greece, Cyrenaica, Ethiopia, Kenya and the Dodecanese Islands. Italian troops will resist compatible with all means and arms at their disposal."

"Strategic possibilities of the German air force will aid in all sectors."

"The entire British plan for 1941 hinges on the general result of this great and cumulative anti-Italian offensive, in connection with which the British have taken daring and audacious decisions."

Axis Blows Hinted

"Italian resistance will play its role in blocking the British plan in Africa and the Mediterranean in time to prevent transportation of armed masses of 'fatal points' where great axis blows will be delivered."

CAIRO, Jan. 29.—British forces were still closing in more tightly around the Italian Libyan stronghold of Derna today, while other forces prepared to wrest Agordat, key to Eritrea's rail and road communications, from the hard-pressed Italians.

Pressure on these two strategic strong points increased after a "Free French" army appeared suddenly in the middle of the Libyan desert and wrecked an important Italian air base.

Pretty Girl, 24, Almost Steals Destroyer Ride To Warmth Of Hawaii

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Jan. 29.—Shirley Dale, 24, and pretty, had some definite ideas about how to get from Flint, Mich., to Honolulu, and the best of them was to stow away on a United States destroyer, she told San Diego police today.

She almost made it, too. She was found hiding behind the big Diesel engines of the U. S. S. Long shortly before the ship was to put to sea.

Naval officers were willing to forget about the matter, dismissing her bold attempt to stow-away as a prank, but they decided they should turn her over to police anyway.

"It was easy," she explained. "I just put on some old navy dungarees, a dark blue sweater and tucked my hair up under a white seaman's cap. Then I just took a shore boat with a bunch of sailors, ambled up the gang-plank past the guards and slipped into the engine room.

"It's down-right cold where I come from," she added, "so I decided to go to Hawaii and get warm. I got to San Diego all right, but I couldn't afford a ticket to Hawaii. I thought if I stowed away on a warship and it got far enough out to sea, it wouldn't turn back when I was found."

What upset naval intelligence men was that the girl was able to get aboard the destroyer at a time when the navy is under virtually wartime restrictions. The section of the waterfront which docks shoreboats is always closely guarded.

old Laski, for a discussion in his hotel suite.

The former Republican presidential candidate then spent 45 minutes with Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, minister of supply, at the latter's offices.

Emerging from this conference Willkie declared:

"I talked to Duncan about production and supply, in which I am very interested."

Shortly after noon Willkie arrived at Transport House in Smith Square to attend a meeting of the Trades Union Congress. Without ceremony, he breezed into the building by a side entrance, entered an elevator and was whisked to the conference room, where he was greeted by George Gibson, president of the congress.

Administration Increases

Yesterday Willkie carried out a heavy program of interviews and sight-seeing despite air raid alarms and anti-aircraft fire, and declared the experience had increased his admiration for the British.

LEGION TO TAKE STAND AGAINST BIG IMMIGRATION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—American Legion officials today expressed complete opposition to any plan whereby the United States might become a haven for refugees from Germany and European areas dominated by the Nazi regime.

John Thomas Taylor, the legion's legislative counsel, in commenting on the disclosure that Germany has told American authorities of its willingness to allow some 450,000 political prisoners and others to come to this country, declared:

"The American Legion has taken a definite stand against permitting any immigration into the United States. We still have a lot of unemployment in the United States and the Legion does not think it wise to open the doors to such groups particularly during the present emergency. The Legion at its last convention adopted a resolution to close all further immigration."

THIS BRITISH STORY COULD BE TRUE; IT'S ABOUT BOMB

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 — "Now, this sounds fantastic," said the British radio announcer. "But I assure you it is perfectly true."

And here is the story he told today as picked by CBS.

"When Portsmouth was bombed, the lord mayor noticed an unexploded bomb had fallen on a certain house and was not accounted for. He went to that house.

"Have you had a bomb here?" he asked.

"Oh, yes," said this man, a dockyard worker.

"I took it and threw it into the sea."

"Oh, in the sea, did you," said the mayor. "Well, how did you get it there?"

"I just took it on the bus. I wasn't going to have a bomb like that in the house. It hadn't even gone off . . ."

retary of War Stimson warned congress today.

Testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Stimson urged speedy approval of the lease-lend bill to "buy time" from Great Britain with which to arm this country.

Obviously referring to Japan, the outspoken secretary said that the United States vitally needs "the protection of British sea power in the North Atlantic while our own fleet is busy protecting us in the Pacific from another threatening nation there."

Stimson said passage of the bill permitting President Roosevelt to turn war supplies and munitions over to England would "go far" toward helping the British "survive the crisis of this spring and summer."

Few Months Vital

If Britain gets through the next few months, he predicted "an ultimate solution in favor of the democracies."

"The axis powers cannot indefinitely hold even the European world in subjugation," he declared. "Sooner or later the inevitable reaction against such slavery will come."

On two broad grounds the secretary urged approval of the legislation:

1. That it would "create order out of the disorder which has existed for nearly two years in the manufacture of munitions in this country" by centralizing war purchases.

2. That the value of weapons may be measured in terms "more flexible than hard cash—in particular in terms of the overall benefit to the United States."

Stimson branded as "short sighted" all attempts to put aid to Britain on the basis of an ordinary loan.

"We are not seeking to make a loan to Great Britain," he declared vehemently. "We are really seeking to purchase her aid in our defense."

from a high fever and two days later the first symptoms of blood poisoning were detected by his physicians.

Yesterday morning Metaxas was given two blood transfusions and in the afternoon a slight improvement in his condition was noted.

But at 8 p. m. he was given the Holy Sacrament and a little later he fell into a coma, which lasted until his death occurred this morning in his private villa.

Born in Cephalonia in 1871, Metaxas was left the undisputed "strong man" of Greece in 1936 by the deaths of four Greek leaders.

He thereupon became premier and dictator and began to remodel his government along the corporate lines of the Italian regime, with which Greece now is at war.

Cheered by Countrymen

Since the Italian war started he had tirelessly encouraged his people and his troops to fight against the Italians, and the series of Hellenic successes have brought great crowds of Athenians frequently to the squares facing his office to cheer him long and loud.

After being graduated from the Athens military college, Metaxas went to Berlin to study military science and later became a member of the Greek general staff.

After participating in the Balkan wars he was appointed chief of the general staff in 1915, but later, when Premier Venizelos suggested to the late King Constantine that Greece participate in the Gallipoli expedition, Metaxas disagreed and resigned.

When Athens was occupied in 1917 the Allies deported Metaxas to Corsica, from where he escaped to Sardinia. Later he was removed to Rome, where he remained until 1920.

On his return to Greece, having disagreed with the king and then Premier Gounaris, Metaxas was "kicked upstairs"—promoted to the rank of general and placed on the retired list.

Formed Own Party

He then became active in politics, establishing a party of his own—the Free Opinion Party.

Then followed an exciting political career, during which he once fled from Patras aboard a Newfoundland schooner hidden among bales of salted codfish.

This career continued until death removed his chief rivals and he assumed power in 1936.

to the field with instructions to inform A. F. of L. workers that the strike had been called. Lieut. Col. Miller said some men had come to work this morning but had taken their tools and gone home.

John Breidenbach, president of the council, said that the fact that the four men were CIO members made no difference "as we don't recognize the CIO as a union."

Miller said officials of the Tenner company were enroute to Dayton and that an attempt to call a conference to iron out the differences would be made tomorrow.

BRICKER NAMES MILLER TO OHIO UTILITIES POST

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29—Governor Bricker today appointed Harry M. Miller, one of his executive secretaries, as a member of the state utilities commission for a six-year term beginning February 1. The appointment must be confirmed by the Ohio Senate.

Miller, 37 years old, is a resident of Gallipolis and a former prosecuting attorney and Republican chairman of Gallia County. He succeeds Roy H. Williams, of Athens.

During the last two years, Miller has handled extradition matters for Bricker. The governor said he had not decided a successor to Miller.

The executive secretary, who is married and has three children, now is on vacation in Florida. As a member of the utilities commission, Miller will receive $6,000 per year.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29—Governor Bricker said today that he expected to submit his budget estimates for the current biennium to the Ohio General Assembly on February 15.

A spokesman added: "But it would be an injustice to the valiant Greeks to say his passing in any way will affect their will to resist."

Home Town—by Sherwood Anderson. Sherwood Anderson is a believer in the American small town, a prophet of its way of life. His Winesburg, Ohio, which was revolutionary in both style and content, has become a classic and an influence upon many modern writers. His Home Town pictures that social unit from which most great Americans have sprung; where time moves slowly in spite of radios and autos and wars; where everyone knows everybody's first name and everybody's business. It is a nostalgic reminiscence rather than an inquiry. In the small town Anderson sees the foundation and test stone of our democracy.

The pictures in the book were taken by photographers of the Farm Security Administration. They are selected out of more than 10,000 taken from Vermont to Texas.

Girl Rebel—by Hsieh Pingying. This autobiography of Hsieh Pingying, with extracts from her new war diaries, has been translated by Odette and Anor Lin and carries an introduction by Lin Yutang.

Hsieh Pingying was a determined young Chinese girl in constant rebellion against society and her conservative family. She changed schools, refused to bind her feet, escaped and "arranged" marriage, and, instead, chose poverty, work, and the life of soldier. This is the story of young China, told with earnestness; the girl herself is not a very appealing character.

The Silent Drum—by N. H. Swanson. Mr. Swanson gives proof in this novel, his first since The Forbidden Ground, that careful research need not slow the pace of exciting adventure. In it you again meet the people of the novel The Judas Tree who here live through the events that brought the first Armed American rebellion against British authority ten years before the outbreak of the Revolutionary War.

Mr. Swanson tells of Arnett Leslie and Frederic Van Buren who escape from Fort Pitt during an Indian siege, of the temporary peace after the relief of the fort, and the growing anger and resentment of the frontier settlers when Philadelphia traders resumed the traffic in guns and powder with the Indians. One group called it trade, the other murder. He tells of that long, tense summer when the Conococheague Valley was in rebellion, when pack trains were being stopped, and the garrison of the famous British Black Watch was besieged. The author hasn't softened the facts to make a pleasant story. As a result it carries conviction; and, as one reads, he again relives those days along the Pennsylvania frontier.

Wilmot - Wilmot - Wilmeth—compiled by James L. Wilmeth. The history, genealogy, and notes on some families known by the names of Wilmot, Wilmeth, and Wilmeth, with records from official and private sources, biographical and genealogical sketches and history of the family in England, Virginia, Maryland, Tennessee, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and various other states.

The book was presented by the compiler to the library.

FORD WILL QUIT BEFORE BOWING TO CIO DEMAND

ties over the the government for a dollar-a-year to be operated by the federal government.

Strike Threatened

The CIO, meanwhile, has threatened to call a strike at Ford's factories in the Detroit area before the end of February, unless Ford calls off his present opposition to CIO organization of his workers. The recent CIO national convention adopted a resolution, declaring "the organization of the Ford workers to be the paramount objective of the Congress of Industrial Organizations in the months to come."

In urging its adoption, Michael F. Widman, director of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) drive against the Ford company, declared:

"If Ford wants a strike, we will be prepared soon to give him that too."

The National Defense Commission and the War Department, meanwhile, say there is "no change" in the government's attitude toward the Ford company. This means that Ford is to be treated just like any other applicant for a war contract.

Democratic Minority Irked By Delay In Measure To Reimburse Districts

220 BILLS IN HOPPER

Compensation Act Changes May Draw Fire From Many Sources

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29 — Democratic minority members of both Houses mapped plans today to oppose a number of administration-sponsored bills in the 94th General Assembly as cautious Republican legislative leaders marked time on 220 pending measures.

A break in the "friendly" relations that have existed between Democrats and Republicans since the legislature convened January 6 was predicted by capital spokesmen over proposals that would increase or decrease the amount of state funds allocated to local subdivisions.

Open debate on controversial issues has been avoided during the last three weeks mainly because only one measure has reached a final vote—the partial appropriation bill.

The only other act ready for final action is that of Sen. Ward (R-Columbus) calling for appropriation of $2,209,210 to reimburse municipalities for relief funds expended last year. Passed by the Senate in record time, the bill now is awaiting action by the House finance committee.

Time Needed For Study

GOP leaders in the Assembly contended that the apparent delay in acting on pending measures was due to the fact that members had not had time to study the state's financial condition.

Despite an estimated surplus of $6,000,000 in the state treasury, GOP legislative leaders intimated they would not be "rushed" into spending that amount and millions more.

Senate Minority Leader Boyd (D-Cleveland) intimated he would attempt to line up Democrats in both Houses in opposition to any Republican attempt to curtail allocations of state funds to local subdivisions.

Boyd called a joint caucus of Democratic members consider minority legislative program and opposition to administration-sponsored bills for this afternoon.

The Senate leader said he would submit to the gathering a resolution criticizing Governor Bricker for urging on the Assembly "strictest economy" in the matter of allocating additional funds to municipalities.

Boyd asserted that the only reason Bricker wished to curtail such appropriations was to pay off the $12,000,000 school deficit so he could win support of rural counties for his "third term ambitions."

Pending in the legislature now are two bills submitted by Rep. Huml (D-Cuyahoga) and Sen. Lipscher (D-Youngstown) that would boost from $12,000,000 to $17,000,000 annually the amount allocated to subdivisions from sales tax collections.

Recklessness Hit

House Majority Leader Houston (R-Champaign) insisted that the delay in acting on pending bills was justified because it would prevent the possibility of spending "recklessly" money now in the treasury as well as the millions anticipated through tax revenues this year and next.

A number of highly controversial bills were included in 37 House and 14 Senate measures tossed into hoppers as the fourth week of the session got under way.

Most likely to invite debate, if they are permitted to reach the floor, are bills calling for vital changes in benefit payments under the Unemployment Compensation Act and the creation of a labor board or commission to regulate Ohio industries.

Similar measures introduced in the Senate by Sen. Keifer (R-Springfield) and in the House by Reps. Buckley-Burke-Clayman (D-Mahoning-Lucas-Trumbull) would: Increase maximum BUC benefit payments from $15 to $20 per week; extend total payments from 16 to 26 weeks; provide for a minimum payment of $7 per week, and reduce the waiting period from three weeks to one week.

Sen. Connolly (D-Toledo) introduced a measure that would create a "Labor Relations Commission" in the Department of Industrial Relations. It would consist of three members appointed by the governor for three-year terms at salaries of $5,000 per year.

To Establish Board

In the House recently a similar measure was introduced by Rep. Huml (D-Cuyahoga) to establish an Ohio Labor Relations Board modeled after the National Labor Relations Board. Both measures would give the established body authority to rule on collective bargaining and unfair labor practices and define collective bargaining in labor disputes in purely state industries.

Both measures have the support of local and state labor unions.

Other new measures submitted in the two houses included:

Rep. Zona (D-Cuyahoga) To exempt clothing and wearing apparel purchases up to $26 and restaurant meals up to 50 cents from the state sales tax.

Rep. Cordes (R-Hamilton) To prohibit the employment of women in places of business where they would be required to "draw beer, pour whiskey from bottles or mix drinks." Present laws bar their employment only in drinking spots that cater exclusively to men.

Another Cordes measure would withhold liquor permits in places where liquor is sold unless all employees are citizens of the United States.

Rep. Burgett (R-Ashtabula) To authorize the state highway director to keep secret the department's estimates of costs of projects for which contracts are to be awarded; and to award contracts on bids 10 percent above estimates.

New District Asked

Rep. Harter (D-Summit) To create an extra or 23rd Congressional district by reshuffling the following districts: Wood and Seneca Counties from the 13th to the 5th district; Medina and Lorain from the 14th to 13th; Summit becomes 14th; Mahoning and Trumbull 19th; Ashtabula, Lake, Geauga, Portage and part of Cuyahoga become the new 23rd.

Rep. Kasch (D-Summit) To raise from four to five percent contributions of school teachers and maintenance employees to the retirement fund.

Sen. Hays (D-Flushing, Belmont) To prohibit employment by the state of both husband and wife. A similar measure recently was introduced in the House by Rep. Dunn (D-Tuscarawas).

Sen. Hoffman (R-Columbus) To permit counties and municipalities to lease voting machines.

Sen. Hoffman (R-Columbus) To authorize highway patrolmen and other peace officers to enforce the coal weight law.

RAILROADER INJURED IN LOCOMOTIVE'S STOKER

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29—His left arm amputated after two hours of feverish work failed to release him from an automatic stoker in a B. & O. locomotive, Calvin Edwards, 50-year-old Negro machinist's helper, was in serious condition in a Columbus hospital today.

Firemen and mechanics worked with crowbars and torches to break the stoker and release the mangled arm of the man, of nearby Reynoldsburg, but to no avail. As a last resort, two surgeons amputated the arm at the elbow.

Railroad officials said Edwards was cleaning the stoker when his arm became caught.

LANCASTER BLOCKS MOVE TO USE PARKING METERS

LANCASTER, Jan. 29—Lancaster City Council again has blocked an attempt to revive a proposal to install parking meters. The proposal was tabled five months ago when it came before councilmen.

It was brought to the council floor at Monday night's meeting by Councilman Poling, who maintained that the city needed revenue this year and thought the meters would bring in a substantial amount.

A motion to introduce an ordinance giving the meters a trial was defeated by a 4 to 3 vote.

FURNITURE FIRM CHANGES NAME

Chester Blue Announces New Policy For His Company

Announcement was made Tuesday by Chester Blue of Circleville that the Circleville Furniture Co., East Main Street, will change its name March 1 to the Blue Furniture Co. The change will make this store's name uniform with the company's units in Washington, C. H. and London. The firm is owned by Mr. Blue and his brother, Lloyd A., of Chillicothe.

The Circleville Furniture Co. started operation in Circleville in 1935, another store was opened in Washington, C. H. in 1938, and last year a third store was opened in London. Additional stores are planned in other progressive central Ohio cities.

By operating under one name the concern plans to centralize its offices in Circleville, doing all buying and administrative work from this one point. "This will give us additional buying power by operating as a group and as a result better prices for our merchandise," Mr. Blue said.

The Circleville store plans an extensive stock reduction sale event to clear out certain lines before adding new nationally advertised lines of merchandise.

"A new system of financing is being worked out," according to Mr. Blue, "whereby the purchaser can arrange his own terms."

A new service department will be set up for repair and service of appliances and other merchandise. Any purchase from the new Blue Furniture Co. will be serviced from any one of the three units.

Bricker, Bevis Booked; Five Get Farm Honors

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29—Governor Bricker and Ohio State University President Howard L. Bevis were to speak at the 29th annual Farmers Week on the university campus today, one of the "big days" of the agriculture get-together.

Attendance at yesterday's session was 2,120, only 319 less than last year's record Tuesday. Attendance, however, is running slightly behind 1940 when approximately 14,000 farmers and their families registered.

Main attraction of yesterday's sessions was the presentation of "Master Farmer" degrees to five farmers—George W. Hill, Jefferson County; Otto G. Haubell, Chillicothe; I. M. Cavanaugh, Burton; Willis F. Rupert, New Waterford, and W. G. Weigle, Van Wert.

Winners in the baby chick show were announced with the grand sweepstakes trophy being awarded to Vaughn's Hatchery, Columbus. Firsts in the six breeds were:

Highest scoring eggs were shown by Moll's Breeding Farm, Wauseon.

Speakers at the second day's sessions included Prof. John D. Black of Harvard University's school of economics. He told the farmers that farm organizations will lead the way to adoption of "a successful pattern of a truly functioning democracy."

ECONOMIC CONTRASTS

OUR most important economic problem, says C. C. Arbuthnot of Western Reserve University, is "the preservation of the world's most efficient economic system." He maintains that our system has done more to raise the general level of living than was done in all the centuries before the nineteenth, and in the last 150 years it has done more for the common man than all the systems devised from the days of the cave man to the eighteenth century.

"It is this system," he says, "that Hitler threatens to wreck. Hitler's system and free enterprise cannot operate side by side. His system must control or collapse. His theory and practice leave no room for doubt. All who believed that they could appease him have been ruined. To join the pitiful procession of his dupes is inexcusable."

Here is a phase of the Nazi threat which has not been emphasized much lately. It is often overlooked because people's attention is caught by the more obvious perils of conquest and slavery. It is well for Americans especially to remember that wherever Hitler wins, individual enterprise is doomed, the opportunities of free capitalism are gone, economic life is enslaved along with political life, material progress is blighted along with private freedom.

A NOBLE LAUNDRESS

MANY people may feel ashamed of their own selfishness when they read of the life and death of Miss Katherine Bohm, who died in Cleveland at the age of 80.

Coming from Germany when a girl, she worked as a neighborhood laundress for more than 60 years. All those years she took care of herself, lived modestly and helped others. At the time of her death she was nearly blind and had had one leg amputated. Although she had passed through many hard time, she never asked for nor accepted charity. When she could, she saved money from her small earnings.

When she died, she left her life's earnings to the Cleveland Foundation for philanthropic use unconditionally.

The first $500 of that fund is going to a Society for the Blind to pay for artificial eyes and eyeglasses, and for dental work for needy people who may thereby improve their chances for employment.

That woman, we'll say, was a heroine. And if her own garments should need any laundering where she is now, the angels should be doing it for her.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

EX-AMBASSADOR WILLIAM C. BULLITT'S recent speech before the International Relations club of the University of North Carolina embodied a very cleverly expressed argument in favor of America's participation in the wars the British and the Greeks are waging against the European Axis powers and that China is waging against the Japanese.

Bill, now out of the diplomatic service but representative in France at the time of its collapse under German pressure, said he was aware that this country's public opinion is strongly against any extension of our aid to the overseas democracies beyond the "short of war" limit, but he vehemently urged our extension of as much as possible of it up to that limit. Yet, by not going beyond it, he emphasized, we're "taking the risk, with our eyes open," of a totalitarian victory. And what would that mean to us? Bill thinks it would mean. According to his account, it would be awful.

He knows something about existence under a dictatorship, too; for while he was our ambassador in Russia.

"Existence in the totalitarian states," he explained to his North Carolina audience, "is not life as we Americans understand it. It's a living terror." He amplified this idea with plenty of half-raising descriptions of conditions he's familiar with from his residence in their midst.

Suppose, then, that the totalitarianism win. If they do, says Bill, they'll control more than 90 percent of the human race. And he's doubtful that we could long stand off such a preponderance against us.

As for appeasing the dictators? "There was," quotes Bill, "a young lady of Niger, who went for a ride on a tiger. They returned from the ride, with the lady inside, and a smile on the face of the tiger."

A LONG CHANCE? In short, there's no getting away from Bill's conclusion that, while we certainly ought to do all we can for the democracies "short of war," we're taking a long chance on our own future by stopping short of that.

I've touched on his speech only in the high spots. Space isn't available for more than that. Besides, it already has been published in full. There's about half a newspaper page of it. And it's worth reading by anyone who hasn't already perused it.

But some of our isolationists in Washington are saying it's peculiar that it go so much publicity. Bill isn't in public life at present. There was no inappropriateness in his speech, as there probably would have been if he still were an ambassador. Nevertheless, he's of no official consequence since he resigned. He made his speech at a gathering of no particular importance; it wouldn't have been surprising if some individual magazine had printed an article by him.

But how did it happen that every daily newspaper in the country received an advance copy of that special address? That's what our isolationists are asking. And they're surmising that Bill himself, or somebody else, who favors our active war participation, attended to the job of disseminating it.

DISTURBS ISOLATIONISTS There's no criticism of the editors. Bill handled his subject very ably from the pro-participation standpoint and the "pros" have a right to be heard from. All the same, the isolationists maintain that it was a conspicuous piece of propaganda, and a convincing piece of it also.

Furthermore, they say it was a coincidence that it followed right on the heels of President Roosevelt's preparedness message to congress. The isolationists, as we all know, insist that the president everlastingly is edging us more and more nearly into actual war, but can't admit it. Was there, they ask, any deliberate timing of Bill Bullitt's ebullience?

In connection with our preparedness and "aid the democracies" program, just pending, the question's being a good bit discussed on Capitol Hill.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

HOUSE WILL AMEND BILL

WASHINGTON—The House will pass the lend-lease bill by a decisive majority and without any major curtailment of the wide powers it grants the President, but the measure will be amended in three respects:

(1) There will be a fixed limit on its duration; (2) the President will be required to report to Congress, every three months, what has been done under the act; and (3) conveying of supply ships will be expressly prohibited.

Privately, the Administration would be glad to accept any time limit so long as it is expressed in general terms, such as for the "duration of the national emergency." But it's doubtful whether that can be put over. Sentiment is strong in the house for restricting the law to a specific period of time.

The Republicans, most of whom are opposed to the bill, want to hold down its operation to one year. The Democrats are for a minimum of two years, and they will have the votes to decide the matter.

Sentiment for the convoy ban is overwhelming. Many congressmen are insisting on it as the price of their support. They are telling leaders the ban is necessary to allay war fears in their district. They admit Roosevelt has stated repeatedly that he has no intention of conveying ships, but the boys insist that it be put down in writing.

This is particularly true of the small group of Republicans who otherwise favor the bill. They are demanding the amendment for their protection.

The GOP, incidentally, is in a tough spot. The overwhelming majority is against the bill, but afraid such a line-up will hang an appeasement label on the Republican Party. That is why there will be no whips cracked to make the boys vote.

HOUSE FIRST

Some of the Democratic House leaders would have preferred to let the Senate take the bill first, believing that would save time on amendments in the end. But the White House feared a protracted Senate battle and a delay that would have an unfavorable psychological effect. Quick action by the speedier House would give the bill a stronger position both in the Senate and with the public.

The Administration can thank three Southerners for getting the bill through the public hearings and Foreign Affairs Committee with a minimum of mauling. They are Representatives Luther Johnson, level-headed, veteran Texan; James P. Richards of South Carolina, and Wirt Courtney of Tennessee. They carried the ball when the going got tough and without any grandstanding, did a very smooth job of it.

NOTE—Isolationist intimates of Senator Burt Wheeler are hinting that he will spring a big sensation during the Senate debate on the bill. The intimation is that it has to do with the peace efforts of William R. Davis, who bartered Mexican oil to the Nazis and recently denied he was a financial backer of Verne Marshall's No Foreign Wars Committee.

Physical Therapy

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

It has struck me for some time that it is rather strange that when I hear people talking about their complaints and what has been done for them, they so seldom seem to have taken advantage of the measures which come under the general head of physical therapy. A person with neuralgia will have taken all kinds of anodynes and pain-killing remedies which upset his stomach but will never have thought of trying infra-red light. Those with skin eruptions have used ointments and greases for years but have never had the advantage of light treatment or X-ray treatment. And those with rheumatism, either of the muscles or the joints, have tried all sorts of things but have never had the advantage of diathermy.

Physical therapy includes the use of everything that might be called Nature's methods—water, light, heat and cold. I include massage under Nature's methods because the natural thing for anyone to do when he has had an injury is to rub the affected part. The dog licks his wounds, which is a form of physical therapy.

Includes Four Treatments

Specifically, physical therapy includes (1) massage, (2) exercises, (3) light which ranges from sunlight to artificial radiation, (4) water or hydrotherapy—baths, local applications, pools for infantile paralysis, cold sponge baths for fever, the hot pack and the cold pack for nervous conditions, insomnia or fever, (5) electrotherapy, including diathermy and the production of artificial fever, which is applicable to many diseases.

Every hospital in a city of any size should try to have a physical therapy department. It is my experience they will soon find that the number of patients they have justified the expense of putting in a trained technician.

Some weeks ago I gave the methods of treatment in physical therapy that could be used in arthritis at home, by the patient or a member of the family after a little instruction. There are, however, of course, many valuable forms of physical therapy that cannot be used by the unskilled and for this reason the technician in physical therapy should be considered. As a matter of fact, physical therapy is now a specialty in which many full-fledged M.D.'s engage.

Physician Necessary

A newspaper recently made the statement, "As a matter of fact, all that is necessary to become a skilled technician or operator in physical therapy is to know how to use or apply heat, massage and exercise. One need not be a physician because most physical therapists work under the direction or prescription of the patient's physician."

In answer to this the Archives of Physical Therapy says, editorially, "Syndicated articles would best serve the greater good if they emphasize that physical therapists must first be qualified physicians and surgeons of considerable experience before they can prepare themselves to become specialists in physical medicine. So far as their technicians are concerned, their role and function correspond to those of graduate nurses in other fields and no more. And just as no ethical and conscientious nurse will care to assume the role of an independent practitioner but will content herself with strictly carrying out the instructions given her by her medical employers, so no technician can carry out any form of treatment beyond the specific directions prescribed by physicians qualified as physical therapists, as otherwise the doors would be opened to medical anarchy with resultant incalculable injury to innocent sufferers."

"Good morning, Nancy," Mrs. Gould's voice held a mournful note, but when Janet spoke I thought physical weariness predominated in her voice.

I crossed to the chaise longue and rushed into speech. I couldn't allow a silence to arise. If it did I could never break it. "I should have been up before, Mrs. Gould," I said earnestly, "but I was detained. Words are such poor things at a time like this, but I think you know all I would like to say. If there is anything at all which I can do—" I stopped short and looked down at her. I had to stop, break down or get out. The

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

J. B.:—"Excluding economic or social conditions, what, in your opinion, would be considered a desirable and most healthy climate? Our various state Chambers of Commerce merely confuse one. Does the fact that one has lived the greater part of one's life in the same climate have any effect on the health when making a change to an entirely different climate?"

Answer—You say you exclude social and economic conditions. I would also like to exclude one other thing—the assumption that there is no definite disease present. Of course, if a person has asthma or arthritis, a climate consideration is different from that of a normal, healthy individual. That being the case, I should say that any part of the United States or Canada is a healthy climate for most people. More important than climate is a good Board of Health to see that you have clean water and food supply, mosquito control, etc. Certainly it is true that if people have been used to a given climate it is difficult to make adjustments to an entirely new one.

MURDER MAKES A HERO

BY ELLIOTT FILLION

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

JUST AS Kaye went out the door, the nurse came back and went up the stairs. I followed her to the second floor and down the hall. She entered the captain's room; I continued on to Mrs. Gould's.

I was pondering Kaye's words, appearance and act. Something about her grated upon me this morning, but I could not place what it was. Her passionate words of last night returned to my mind. If she and Dave decided to go out and get married, there wasn't a thing on earth I could do to stop them. I hoped they wouldn't do it; I feared it would hurt Dave with the police. They might even try to add the motive of fortune hunting to the one they already held against him. With Mark gone, Kaye would double her inheritance. I struggled to throw off my augmented dejection, but it clung to me until I tapped at Mrs. Gould's door.

"Come in," Her voice, sweet and gentle as ever, answered, and I entered to find her, robed in black, lying on a chaise longue. Janet, also in black, was sitting beside her.

I started violently as I glimpsed them; my memory had clicked into place. That was what impressed me so unfavorably in Kaye, although until now I hadn't recognized it for what it was.

I had put on a simple black dress, relieved by sheer white collar and cuffs, that morning. It seemed the only appropriate thing to do, a gesture of respect for the genial light-hearted young fellow I had liked and admired. Cary was in somber black clothes when I saw him in the library; here were Mrs. Gould and Janet in the same. But Kaye—clad in a brownish tweed suit and fawn felt hat with crisp pheasant feather at the side—she had just walked out the front door.

Why did she do such a thing? Didn't she really care? Was it merely an expression of defiance because of Dave's involvement? Those questions wouldn't answer themselves nor could I puzzle out the solution.

"Good morning, Nancy," Mrs. Gould's voice held a mournful note, but when Janet spoke I thought physical weariness predominated in her voice.

I crossed to the chaise longue and rushed into speech. I couldn't allow a silence to arise. If it did I could never break it.

"I should have been up before, Mrs. Gould," I said earnestly, "but I was detained. Words are such poor things at a time like this, but I think you know all I would like to say. If there is anything at all which I can do—" I stopped short and looked down at her. I had to stop, break down or get out. The awfulness of it all rushed with renewed force over me.

Janet stretched out her hand and drew me down to a seat beside her. "We understand, don't we, Aunt Beulah?" she asked softly. "There really isn't anything anyone can do, Nancy, except—smile."

She followed her own words with the most appalling travesty of one I had ever seen. It made me feel even worse than before. Last night the horror and excitement of the whole thing had kept sorrow away. This morning the sight of the two women enduring what I knew was tearing them to little bits was almost too much for me.

As I sat down beside Janet, Mrs. Gould stretched out her hand and laid it on mine.

"You are a nice child, Nancy," she said. "Tell me, have they learned anything at all?"

As she spoke, I felt Janet's foot, with meaning pressure, touch mine. I knew by that signal that I must speak warily if I were not to reveal something they must be keeping from her.

"I don't think so," I replied. "I've just come from Captain Lancy and Chief Crane; they're concentrating on an unknown man with an unknown motive." With that noncommittal statement I would be safe.

Another slight pressure from Janet's foot brought my eyes to her face. Surprisingly, she nodded her head, and from that, I knew I had said the right thing.

"It is not understandable," Mrs. Gould's voice held patient resignation. "Why should anyone want to harm my boy? Unless," she raised herself to a sitting posture, "unless it was Bill Wing!" Her eyes were distorted, filled with the horror of a memory just returned to her mind.

Bill Wing! I started violently, looked eagerly at her. I wished she would go on, yet I didn't like to ask her to do so.

Possibly my unspoken desire incited her to continue. Possibly she needed the relief of expressing new thoughts. Janet told me later that all night she had remained on that chaise longue, tearless, telling the little incidents which are so faithfully retained in a mother's mind.

Mark's first baby word, his first baby step, events of his childhood, schooldays, things which wrung Janet's heart to hear, his mother had told over and over in a despairing monotonous voice. Now, she spoke with horrified animation.

"He threatened me years ago—vowed he would pay me out for trying to keep Marie from him by depriving me of what I loved best. Oh! She clasped her hand over her mouth, as though shocked by what she had inadvertently revealed. "Don't ever let Kaye know I said that," she pleaded. "I have tried to be impartial with my two children but—I think most mothers have a particular love for their sons, especially so if they have only one as I have—had. And with that the tears came, such heart-broken weeping I hope never to see again.

Janet and I did what we could for her. When she lay back on her pillows, white and exhausted, I asked the question which I feared would bring on her tears. But it had to be done. I nerved myself to the task. Slipping to my knees, I clasped her cold, limp fingers in mine and asked:

"Mrs. Gould, have you told Captain Lancy about Bill Wing?" "I just remembered it," she whispered. Again her eyes filled with tears.

"You must do so," I said, with all the force I could put into my words. "I'll go and get him; you must tell him what you have told me."

"I didn't allow her to finish her remonstrating. "Oh, Nancy!"

"Do you want to know the truth or not?" I demanded impressively.

"Could he have done it—after all these years?"

"We can't know that, but Captain Lancy must be told. It is the last thing you can do for—Mark." Perhaps my words were unnecessary under the circumstances, but I used the only weapon which I thought would bring compliance. And I was right to do so.

With both hands, she pushed me from her. Her voice was as strong, as insistent, as mine.

"Get him, Nancy. Get him!"

"I didn't wait for another word, but flew down the stairs and around to the library. At my knock, Captain Lancy's voice gave me permission to enter. I have since thought that I must have presented a wild appearance. My face was tear stained—no one on earth could have witnessed Mrs. Gould's suffering unmoved—my hair was in wild disorder; I hadn't even thought to run my fingers through it; I remembered that afterward.

In the library, Captain Lancy and Chief Crane were in deep consultation with several men, some uniformed, some not, all strangers to me. At the precise moment of my entrance, Captain Lancy, his finger pointing to something on a paper spread before him, was saying:

"You can get an airplane at West-tux airport. I want this information tonight." He raised his head, looked at me, sprang to his feet and demanded:

"What is it? Has something else happened?"

I could only gasp in reply. My tearing rush down those stairs had literally winded me. Twice I started to speak and was compelled to stop. But that time everyone of those men were on their feet and gathered around me.

"Mrs. Gould—has—something to tell—you. It's important! Come quick!"

I grabbed Captain Lancy's arm—that he was a state police detective never entered my mind—and urged him toward the door.

Rudy Vallee is the handsome, young President of the college, and John Barrymore is Professor at large. Vallee is forced to fire Barrymore because of his aberrations. Billie Burke is a rich widow who is planning to endow the college with a large sum, and Lurene Tuttle is Miss Burke's daughter, who is attending the college. Vallee falls in love with Lurene, and, at the insistence of Billie Burke, re-engages Professor Barrymore. The college gets the endowment. Barrymore his job, and Vallee the girl, and all is well.

DENTIST GETS AWARD

Dr. P. H. Mullaly, a Cleveland, Ohio dentist, received the $1,000 gift from the sponsors of Horace Heidt's "Pot O' Gold" broadcast Thursday, Jan. 23. Although Dr. Mullaly was busy in his office at the time Horace phoned him, Mrs. Mullaly was home and received the call, almost fainting when she discovered her husband's good fortune. "This is just what the doctor ordered," said Heidt to Mrs. Mullaly. "The Buckeye state now is the one thousand buckeye state!" Dr. and Mrs. Mullaly have five children ranging in ages from 9 to 21 years.

George Burns and Mary Livingstone did some fancy steps at Ciro's, popular Hollywood niter, the other evening, while Gracie Allen and Jack Benny, their respective better seven-eights, looked on.

STARS SAY—

For Wednesday, January 29

A DAY in which the outcome of events, both current and far reaching, depends upon the restraint, control and balanced action of the moment. There are signs of progress and expansion with a degree of stabilization of the affairs with some unforeseen and surprising benefits to be reaped, but such could be entirely nullified by impulsive, erratic or wild actions or more or less irrational decisions.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may have the augury of a year of progress and security, with increase in business and finance, with certain very profitable new contacts, but these dependent upon a sane and balanced manipulation of advantages and surprising openings and not by impulsive, flighty, excited even wild and fantastic decisions and behavior. There may be danger from flights of fancy, or other rebellious phases of the highly exhilarated emotions and overstimulated imagination. With reserve, composure and sound acumen in sudden situations real benefit may accrue.

A child born on this day although having ability and some stability yet may be prone to be carried away by "tempest and fury," revolutionary ideas and erratic temperament, the mind and emotions under peculiar stress.

FIFTH GRADE

The fifth grade is making maps of the United States for Geography. We make one state at a time and when we have finished we will each have a large map of our own. Letters were written in English class. Six of the best were put on the bulletin board. They were written by Donna May, Betty Martin, Eleanor Hutchins, Phyllis Dresbach, Barbara Griffith, and Ivan Lindsey.

Barbara Griffith planned and made a free-hand board design. It was done with colored chalk. We had several people who were here every day last semester. They were Ivan Lindsey, Doris Spangler, Virginia Owens, Martin Barr, Mary Shirley, Betty Martin, and Ruth Fetherolf.

THREE SUBJECTS PLANNED FOR BANKER'S MEETING

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29—National defense financing, agricultural credit and investments will be studied at the annual Mid-Winter Meeting of the Ohio Bankers Association to be held at the Neil House in Columbus on February 12. J. D. St. John, vice president, Toledo Trust Company, and president of the Association, announced today.

Sidney B. Congdon, president of the National City Bank of Cleveland and representative of the National Defense Loans Committee of the American Bankers Association, will explain the part bankers can play in connection with the defense program. The banks of this district have been instrumental in bringing the facilities of Ohio industry to the attention of the national defense authorities.

Frank P. Bennett, Jr., of Boston, Mass., editor of The United States Investor, will discuss the present and future investment markets and conditions.

The subject of agricultural credit to which the bankers of Ohio have been giving increasing attention, will be presented by W. D. Meacham of the First National Bank of Clarksville, Tenn. In connection with his address he will present colored motion pictures of the program of that bank, which has attracted national attention because of the benefits to agriculture resulting from it.

AKRON KEEPS UP GREAT PACE BY BEATING DOVER

By International News Service Akron South's swashbuckling Cavaliers continued to lead the pack in the Ohio high school basketball race today after turning in their 12th consecutive win of the season in a 52-46 overtime clash with Dover's Crimson Tornado last night.

Bill Herman, Dover's high-scoring center, tied the game at 45-all with only seconds to play but the Cavaliers couldn't be stopped in the extra session and looped 7 points while the Tornado could score but once.

Herman stole the scoring show from South's Wyndol Gray with a 20 point spree. Gray connected for 15 to raise his season's total to 237 in twelve games. It was Dover's third loss in thirteen starts.

Right next door at New Philadelphia, the defending state champs earned their 7th win in eleven starts by tripping Uhrichsville, 49-25. Piling up a 17-point lead in the first period, the Quakers were never threatened. All-Ohio Glen Barker led the scorers with 15 tallies.

Massillon's Tigers downed Akron St. Vincent, 37-26 for their 9th win in ten starts after holding a narrow 11-9 margin at the half. However, with Buttermore and Gillom finding the range in the second half, the Tigers eased in front and were never threatened. Buttermore scored 10 points and Gillom 9.

Also chalking up their 9th win in ten starts were the Fremont Ross Little Giants who annexed the city title from Fremont St. Joes, 34-28. Capt. Jack Carroll came through with 14 points for the Little Giants.

New Concord stopped McConellsville-Malta's win streak at 11 with a resounding 41-26 beating. The McConellsville team has been boomed as a certain state tournament entry.

CATCHER TURNS DOWN DODGERS' MONEY FIGURES

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—The third unsigned contract from Catcher Mickey Owen was back in the Brooklyn Dodgers' office today and with it a howl from the Springfield, Mo., farmer for at least $10,000 for the coming season.

The $10,000 figure was likewise reputed to be gracing the new Brooklyn contract tendered Pitcher Kirby Higbe, recently acquired from the Phillies for a huge sum. Higbe had already signed a $6,500 pact with the Phils and under the rules the Dodgers were not required to raise it. But Larry MacPhail, the Dodgers' head man, voluntarily upped the stipend.

Owen rejected what he termed a "very slight raise" proffered by the Dodgers and demanded at least two-thirds of what Gus Mancuso got last season for mostly warming a bench for Brooklyn.

Mancuso was thrown in with the deal that brought Owen to the Dodgers from the St. Louis Cardinals. Mancuso reputedly earned $15,000 in '39.

Charlie Keller, outfielder for the New York Yankees, also was given a $10,000 contract.

ENGLUND KEEPS SCORING MARGIN; BUCK ACE CLOSE

CHICAGO, Jan. 29—Gene Englund of Wisconsin retained his Big Ten basketball scoring lead this week, but Dick Fisher, Ohio State forward, climbed into a tie for second place with Michigan's Jim Mandler, the official conference statistics showed today.

Englund, in six games, has tallied 77 points, and Fisher and Mandler each have made 64. Fisher has played in five games and Mandler in seven.

Fourth among the scorers is Mike Sofiak of Michigan, with 61 points, and just behind him is Hank Clason of Northwestern, with 55.

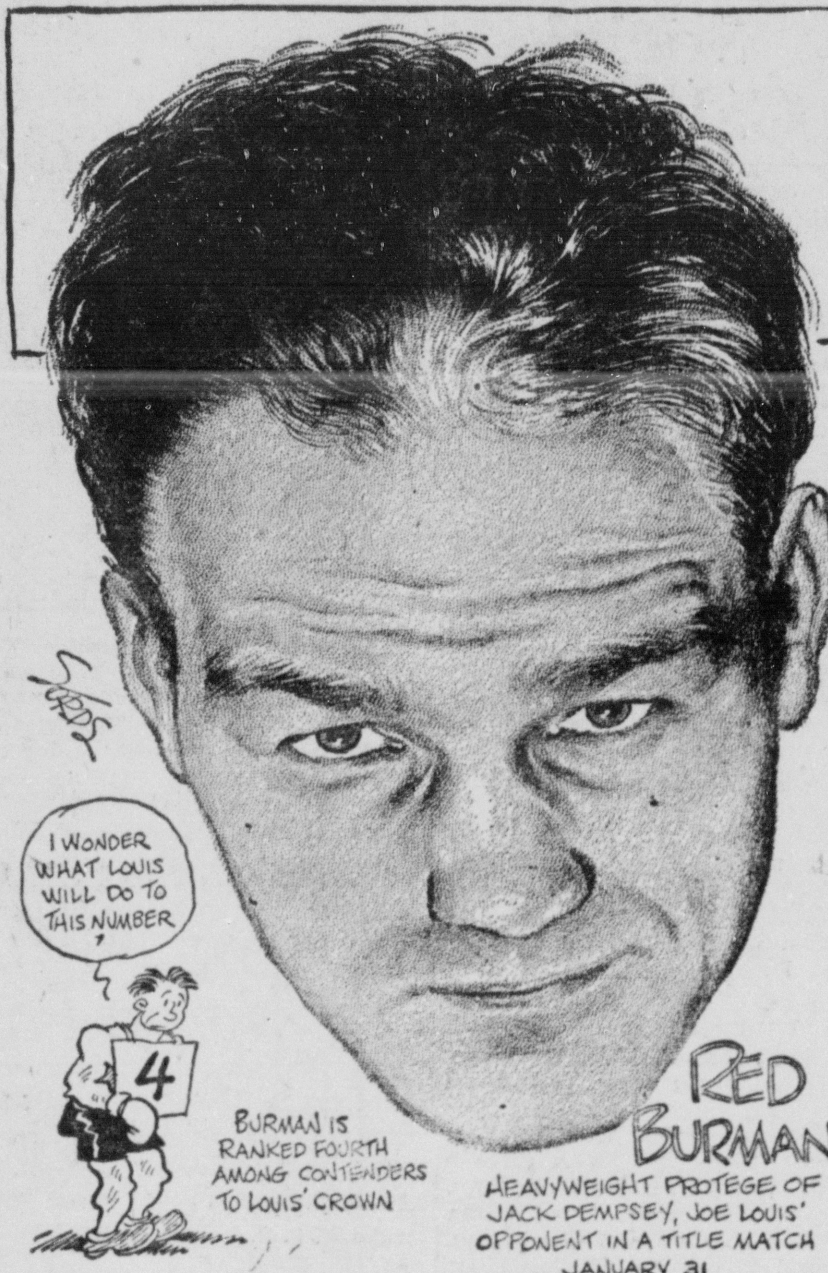

Forrest Sprowl, Purdue's star forward, rates with the best scorers in the matter of averages, with 41 points scored in only three games. Last night, Sprowl paced the Boilermakers to a non-conference win over Detroit, 38-16, in a game regarded as a tuneup for Purdue prior to its important conference clash with undefeated Indiana this Saturday.

NOVA UNDER KNIFE

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 29—Lou Nova, the California heavyweight who hopes his comeback will carry him eventually to a title fight with Champion Joe Louis, today was to undergo a tonsil operation, postponed from last week when he became ill with the flu.

Secretary Parrett Reviews
Activities Of Business
Unit Last Year

New directors of the Circleville Chamber of Commerce, elected by ballot by chamber members, were announced at the annual meeting of the organization at the American Hotel Hurricane Tuesday night.

Five of the 11 directors were newly elected and six reelected. New directors are F. K. Blair, R. L. Brehmer, George Griffith, L. D. May and Don Walker. Other 1941 directors are T. O. Gilliland, Herman Hill, I. W. Kinsey, Dwight Steele, Dan McClain and Clark Will.

No election of officers was held at Tuesday night's meeting, since not all of the directors could be present. Directors will meet next Monday night at 7:30 in Secretary Parrett's office to choose a president, vice-president and chairman of the Retail Merchants Committee.

Principal speaker at the meeting was Representative William D. Radcliff, who outlined for members legislation that may be enacted during the present session of the Ohio general assembly. One of the primary concerns of the legislature this session is the financing of political sub-divisions, Representative Radcliff said. To solve financial problems in cities and counties, the required vote for passage of bond issues may be reduced to a bare majority, with a reallocation of taxes, particularly for relief, being seriously considered.

Relief Outlook Good

"The relief outlook for Ohio is good," Representative Radcliff told Chamber members, although relief conditions in Pickaway County may not show a corresponding improvement, since the county with its few industries will not profit greatly from the National Defense Program. W.P.A. grants for 1941 will be about the same as they were last year, Mr. Radcliff said, with the county receiving its just proportion.

"About 150 bills have been introduced in the house and 50 in the senate, although none of the bills carries radical proposals. 'In so far as is humanly possible, no new tax measures will be enacted,'" the representative said.

Karl Mason, chairman of the Retail Merchants Committee and head of the 1940 Christmas decoration program, announced at the meeting that decoration costs were $500 with total donations amounting to $535, leaving a cash balance of $35.

Dwight Steele, chairman of the Corn and Soybean show, told chamber members that his committee all were functioning and that within a few days he expected to have something definite to report on the program. The show will be held February 14 and 15.

Secretary Parrett outlined various achievements of the organization in an annual report. During the year, the Retail Merchants Association was combined with the Chamber of Commerce and four new directors were added to the organization. Ray E. Row-

Chief speaker was to be Dr. Daniel Poling, pastor of the Baptist Church in Philadelphia. Also scheduled to address the joint session was Walter Van Kirk, secretary of the department of international justice and good will of the federal council of Churches in New York.

WINTER DAYS
TO GO...

START with SOHIO PRODUCTS!

PERHAPS some people in Ohio didn't read the papers last fall when we said we'd guarantee their cars would start, and if they didn't start, we'd pay the garage bill for starting them. We know the ads ran all right, because thousands of Ohioans came in and got their guarantees...

many more of them in fact, than ever before! It just doesn't seem fair to have some people get this swell protection and others not. Is your car guaranteed to start? It isn't? Well! You just drive right in tonight and we'll fix you up in a hurry for the blizzards ahead!

THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY (OHIO)

Has winter caught you yet?
BETTER SWITCH TO SOHIO FOR THE BAD WEATHER AHEAD!
